Parrone Engineering Is Recognized For Its Business Ethics

October 13, 2009 - Parrone Engineering announces that it was named a recipient of the 2009 Rochester Business Ethics Award.

The Rochester Business Ethics Award is given annually to companies based on criteria such as executive commitment to business ethics, the company ethics program, demonstration of good corporate citizenship, and conflict resolution procedures.

"I was extremely humbled to receive this prestigious award and to have the firm honored by our community," said Edward G. Parrone, P.E., FACEC, President and CEO of the firm. "This award is a reflection of the firm and its employees, and we are all appreciative and proud to be a recipient."
